{projects}

Armani Concept Flagship Store Redesign + Community Women's Center Design

This project was a multistage brand study and hypothetical flagship store redesign (located at 160 Delaware Ave, Buffalo, NY 14202) for the Giorgio Armani brand on the first and second retail levels, and a publicly accessed, separate Community Women's center on the third level inspired by Dior and Louis Vuitton. The building currently houses the flagship store for New Era.

The 500 Block Infill Residential Project

This Project was a creative hypothetical in residential design called "The 500 Block". At random, a multitude of careers and hobbies were thrown into two separate hats. The luck of the draw landed each designer with a newly created hypothetical client- and chance chose a graphic designer with a hobby in woodworking. This design was four stories; with the first two floors as leasable retail and office space, and the residential design was limited to the third and fourth floors.

Leslie's Consignment Shop Renovation

This Project was an opportunity to help the Buffalo community and redesign a local store. Leslie's Boutique- a thrift store on the corner of Woodlawn and Fillmore Ave became one of the projects for "Fillmore Forward"- a community revival program in Buffalo. This community organization connected Leslie with the design students at Buffalo State College and from there the project developed into a fully implemented remodel, making it into an article in the local Buffalo Rising newspaper.

Architecture Education at Olmsted Middle School

Enrolled in a teaching practicum elective course, the college corresponded with the local Arch Ed program to connect prospect graduates with working professionals and a classroom in Buffalo. Teamed up with professional architects Timothy Rider, and Kelly Wassum of Trautman Associates and fellow classmate Helen Mills, our initiative came to fruition with a seventh grade classroom at Olmsted Middle School teaching the students about resilient structure building.
